such as a desk or wall mounted without sacrificing floor space.

Filing Cabinet

Office filing cabinets are typically made of sheet metal or wood. A vertical file cabinet has drawers that extend from the short side of the cabinet. A lateral file cabinet has drawers that extend from the long side of the cabinet.

Locker / Wardrobe

These are essential in workplaces where employees need secure storage or common areas where clients can put personal belongings. Whether it's a busy breakroom, or office space, lockers and wardrobes provide a safe place for personal belongings in any commercial setting.

Storage Alternatives

To maintain organized and productive workspaces, it is essential to utilize effective office storage solutions in employee or public areas and in departments that receive mail, and store product samples. Whatever the amount of space your office has, storage products can complement your office appearance both functionally and aesthetically.

Tables

Conference Table

Selecting a conference table involves several crucial factors such as what will the primary use be for internal meetings or outside guests. Other factors to consider are the table's size and shape, seating capacity, materials, power and connectivity, and ergonomics.

Occasional Table

An occasional office table may also be used as an end table-coffee table. It does not have a defined function; in fact, many of these tables serve a dual purpose. These tables are generally small but are available in a variety of sizes, heights, and shapes.

High Top Table

This type of table is ideal for open-concept interiors including meeting, breakroom, and huddle environments. Optional power modules are available for enhanced functionality and performance.

Breakroom

Many businesses use a combination of standard height, counter height, and bar height tables to create an interesting look and give employees and visitors options.

Outdoor

In a work environment an outdoor table extends the confines of the traditional indoor office. Equipping your outdoor space with weather-resistant furniture will give your employees and customers plenty of options for innovative thinking in a relaxing atmosphere.

Meeting Table

Meeting table sets provide designated areas for people to huddle, socialize, or simply recharge. Choose sets that allow rearrangement based on the project or function needs.

Training Table

Training tables serve many purposes from co-workspace to virtual educational sessions or collaborative interactive environments. They provide a stable surface for writing, working on laptops, or engaging in group discussions. Nesting Training Tables are convenient when storage space is limited.
